ADVENTURE VISITS PETOSKEY

The grandeur of the Great Lakes State is often overshadowed by troubled Detroit, but one Michigan author hopes to shed some positive light on the situation. Be it the sweeping quest for treasure in his new novel Inherit All Things, or the submarine chase in his previous book Descending from Duty, J. Ryan Fenzel depicts a vibrant picture of Michigan that counters the negative impact of current headlines.

Fenzel's adventure stories careen through every corner of the state and reveal just how rich a landscape we have. West Michigan plays a pivotal role in the new book, with key scenes unfolding in Grand Rapids, Frankfort, and Harbor Springs. The rollicking treasure hunt tale also plays out across many of Michigan's beaches, harbor towns, and islands.

"I want to show the parts of Michigan you don't see on the six o'clock news every night," Fenzel says. "I want to show that the Great Lakes region can host any story idea I dream up."

Fenzel is promoting Inherit All Things and Michigan awareness in a tour through the region this fall. He is available for interviews through the contact information above.
